

I Apologize

If only songwriters would take half the advice that they so freely dispense in their songs, there's no telling what life might be like.

A single auburn ray
Signaled night had given way
And a new day had arrived

But the fight still lingered on
It should have long been dead and gone
But it was being kept alive
By a fool who thinks he knows it all
But isn't even smart enough to realize
That if all he wants is the last word
Why not once make the last words
I apologize

She has really come off the track
She ain't holding nothing back
And she won't let nothing go

She won't bend and she won't move
I wonder what she hopes to prove
When all she's got left to show
Is a house and home divided
And two hearts all but decided
On their good-byes

If all she wants is the last word
Why not once make the last words
I apologize

There's a world of angry words
And things we only say
So we can hurt the other side
Maybe every now and then
We might think of giving in
But that's one thing a fool never tries
If all you want is the last word
Why not once make the last words
I apologize
If all you want is the last word
Why not once make the last words
I apologize

A single auburn ray
Signaled night had given way
And a new day had arrived

Tony Arata Music (ASCAP)